CONSTITUTIONAL.

The superiority of symbolic money, or currency founded on, and represented by, actual property, is most strikingly exemplified in the present value of the British paper. It is a notorious fact, that one hundred dollars of English bank notes, will exchange in our country for one hundred and twelve of our dollars. The reason is, that from the productive effects of symbolical money, the silver of our nation has been imported to vast amounts, and its consequent value in value has been depreciated. It is a value which should be foreign, or to export forces for distant countries, and thereby to create a demand for foreign goods, and thereby to pay for the fruits of British industry. That those remnants would speedily retire in that event, or from any cause which should raise silver to the par of paper in England, is too evident to need arguments or illustrations. The banks of necessity, would then abandon all pretensions to a specie basis. It is not then the extremity of folly to deny, and to pretend to support a system, which has paralyzed the energies of the nation, and reduced the people to a state of misery, desolation and ruin.

JEW BILL.

Unhappy sons of Juda's sacred race,
Who long have strayed with fear's uneasy pace
From shore to shore; ye that have sought
In vain
In every land, a friend, a home to gain;
Or if received, but with the traitor's smile,
That smothered love, and planned your death
The while.

Juda's sons, wipe off your nation's tears,
Lay by your staff, a place of rest appears.
Here plant your vine, here rear the sacred
Yew.

Yours, your God, shall both receive a home.

Secure as on the Jordan's hallowed shore
They both shall stand, nor sink nor e'er
More.

Fear not the monk whom superstition
Holds dear.

The noon bright star, of great and gen'rous Minds.

In radiant lifts his head above the night,
And drives the phantoms of her womb to flight.

Their gen'rous zeal redeems their land at last.

From this one station upon its scutcheon cast,
Resplendent halos round their heads shall shine.

Immortal chaplets shall their country twine,
Each heart to virtue and to freedom true,
Exults with them, and beats for you.

It is with peculiar anxiety we have for some time watched the proceedings of the Legislature of Maryland, in regard to the Jew bill. And it is with no inconsiderable satisfaction we have traced the progress of intellectual improvement in this state, in the different reception this bill has met with by succeeding legislatures. On its first appearance, the scanty support of eight members forbade its adoption; but how favourably is not the case now altered! The exertions of talent and philanthropy have dissipated the heavy cloud that rested on the horizon of the state; and there is but little doubt of the bill's passing, by a respectable majority. It is not now necessary to explain before the public view the many imperiously convincing arguments which, decked with all the ornaments of fancy, and the various illustrations of erudition, the supporters of this bill laid before the house; the people are too much engaged at present with the topics of local interest to scrutinize these with the necessary patience; but so soon as the legislature adjourns, there is no doubt they will be furnished by able hands, with all the materials necessary to judge impartially, and to the credit of a free people. It is, however, gratifying to every friend of a system of generous policy, to see a man that loves his country as the home of religious and civil liberty, in every breath that both congenial when arguments of vivifying truth are uttered by men of talent in support of all he holds most dear upon earth, to pass by in silence, and without a tribute of gratitude, the indefatigable exertions of the supporters of this bill. They, it is true, find a higher reward within their own spacious minds, than any acknowledgments in the ephemeral sheet of news can possibly afford; but it behooves their country to know the men who most gloriously stood forward to redeem their character, that the may look to them when the "spenser" has "honour," it behooves their friends to know how they laboured in the cause of humanity and justice, that when they return to them, each hand may grasp theirs with deeper confidence. To each individual names are due; their names will be given to the public in the proceedings of the house.

ELBUTHEROPHILOS.

An annual census of the humane and Criminal Institutions in the city of New York, for the year 1822, presents the following results:

Orphan Asylum,	166
City Almshouse,	1712
City Hospital,	249
Debtors' Prison,	129
Bridewell,	123
Penitentiary,	342
State Prison,	580

Increase from 1821—83.

What an insight into human life, human character, and the vanity of human pursuits, is afforded by the above little table. More than one person in every forty, of the population of New York, is a tenant of an almshouse or a prison!

Admit that each debtor has a family dependent upon his exertions for a support, and that that family consists of three persons, the imprisonment of the 120 has brot want and wretchedness on no less than three hundred and sixty innocent beings, besides having deprived society of the services of the debtors themselves. But again these 360 hapless persons must starve, and since those on whom they were dependent are deprived of the power of providing for them, their support devolves on society. Do such consequences argue much in favour of imprisonment for debt?

RECAPITULATION OF THE

Have been published, from which we extract the following matter respecting the Cortes. Their hall is a place of meeting to Cortes, a hall of light and airy decoration. There are no monuments or statues; the memory of Demosthenes, Cicero, Cato, Brutus to usurp the admiration due to the illustrious benefactors of mankind. Instead of statues engravings on square stones, and placed upon the walls themselves of Portier, Levey, and other masters to Spanish freedom, "opposite to the throne, is an inscription, in letters of such a size that the king cannot avoid reading it whenever he takes his seat. The Sovereignty exists essentially in the Nation; to the Nation therefore belongs the right of being her own Lawgiver.

The Deputies have not as in France, any particular costume. Each man speaks from his place extemporaneously, and though there is a Tribune, as in the French chamber, for those who are desirous to play the orator, it is never used, unless when some long-winded discourse is to be recited, which seldom happens. Hence the debates are more lively, natural and prompt. In this they resemble our Congress or the British Parliament; but in the Cortes, they never indulge in quotations or jests of the slightest personal allusion. Nearly one third of the Cortes are Ecclesiastics. A foreigner might suppose himself present at a council of bishops and priests, especially at the end of each sentence, makes the sign of the cross, in the air, with the thumb and two first fingers of the right hand. In the same manner as the Pope, when bestowing his benediction. In case of division each Deputy is called upon by name, and he answers Yes or No. Instead of a tinkling bell, which the president of the French Chamber is continually flourishing, to preserve silence or the cry of order, the members of the Cortes interrupt each other by pronouncing in a solemn tone, these three words, Vamos de espacio, (Let us go on slowly.) The writer complains much of the apathy which constitutes a principal feature in the character of the Spaniards.

COMMUNICATED.

An operation was performed last week upon Mr. Elisha Andrus of East Hartford, which deserves to be mentioned. He had a tumour within the orbit of the eye, closely connected with the under eyelid, and adhering firmly to the lower part of the orbit. It extended nearly over half of the eyeball. Operation had commenced in the centre of the tumour, and would probably have extended itself through the whole substance. It was about the size of a hen's egg, and very hard. The only way of extracting it, was by dissection, which was successfully performed by Mr. William H. Morgan, M. D. of this city. The patient is doing well, and his eye will, without doubt, be completely restored.—Con. Mir.

ERUPTION OF MOUNT VESUVIUS.

The Gazette of Naples, of the 25th October, mentions, that the churches of that capital were crowded with its inhabitants returning thanks to God for having preserved it from danger with which it was threatened, by one of the most terrible eruptions of Mount Vesuvius that had ever occurred. On that day only, the columns of fire, smoke, and ashes, which the volcano threw up, scattering the stones and ashes to an astonishing distance, had begun to diminish. Several thousands of the inhabitants of the neighbourhood had taken refuge in Naples. The roads were blocked up with stones and ashes. The noise of the several explosions was tremendous, and the shock of each, as the mountain rocked, was felt on every side for miles. The torrent of lava in the direction of Resina, covered at once more than a hundred acres, and about two hours after sunrise on the 21st October, it was seen rolling onward about a mile in width. Ashes fell in the streets of the city of Naples.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

The Legislature of North Carolina, have abolished imprisonment for debt. So has, also, the state of Kentucky. Congress too, have become alive to it; and a bill is now before the legislature of Maryland to abolish imprisonment for debt in that state. That such imprisonment is not only cruel and barbarous, but contrary to the spirit of both state and federal constitutions, is becoming generally believed. It pays no debt, and mostly renders the prisoners utterly unable to pay hereafter. Free Jour.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.

A botanical friend informs us of the remarkable fact, that the Taba Verna, is now, (Jan. 25,) in full flower throughout our City Commons.—Nat. Int.

Charleston, (S C) January 15.

The weather of yesterday was extremely cold and water froze in the shade throughout the day. If the cold was proportionably severe in the north the rivers must have closed.

Our provision market is now so very high that supplies of fresh meats from the north could not fail to pay a handsome profit to those who would bring them. Fresh Beef, of a poor quality, sells at 15 to 18 cents per lb. and small meats in proportion.

York, (Penn.) Jan. 21.

On Friday night last, the mail stage from Philadelphia, between York and Wrights ville, was fired at between 10 and 11 o'clock at night—nobody was hurt or hurt by it.

In an appeal case against an order of settlement which came on at the Leeds Borough Sessions on Thursday last, Mr. Wailes, one of the counsel, asked the pauper's mistress upon what footing she (the pauper) came into her service? To which the witness, with great simplicity, replied, "Oh! Sir, she did not come on any footing at all—she came on horseback."
